The Social, Humanitarian, and Cultural Committee

Deeply concerned about the level of global humanitarian needs and the threat of famine presently facing millions of people in armed conflicts, as well as about the number of undernourished people in the world,

Noting the devastating impact on civilians of ongoing armed conflict and related violence, and emphasising with deep concern that they have devastating humanitarian consequences, often hindering an effective humanitarian response, and are therefore a major cause of the current risk of famine,

Expressing concern over the growing number of armed conflicts in different geographic areas, and the urgent need for redoubled efforts for their prevention and resolution, addressing, where pertinent, the regional dimensions of armed conflicts with specific emphasis on regional diplomacy and arrangements ,

Recognising the need to break the vicious cycle between armed conflict and food insecurity ,

Reaffirming the full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and their Additional Protocols of 1977, and the obligation of High Contracting Parties and parties to armed conflict to respect and ensure respect for international humanitarian law in all circumstances ,

Acknowledging that peace and security, development and human rights are the pillars of the United Nations system and the foundations for collective security and well-being,

Recalling the particular impact which armed conflict has on women and children, including as refugees and internally displaced persons, as well as on other vulnerable civilians, and stressing the protection and assistance needs of all affected communities,

Recognizing that States bear the primary responsibility to respect and ensure the human rights of their citizens, as well as all individuals within their territory, as provided for by relevant international law,

Guided by the principles of the United Nations

1. Calls for the establishment of coordination centers in neighboring amiable countries of those affected by violent crackdowns on civil protests, and further funded with $200 Million originated from frozen assets, with official financial reviews that will happen every two months and an additional two major inspections during this period, in order to:
 - a. channel NGOs operating in the crisis zone with resources such as:
 - i. medical supplies,
 - ii. food parcels,
 - iii. clean- water kits,
 - b. produce a publicly released "Humanitarian Impact Database", in partnership with the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, every few weeks, tracking casualties, aid deliveries, and progress on the diplomatic benchmarks, with the aim of:
 - i. laying the foundation of a data stream that prevents misinformation regarding the status of the situation,
 - ii. becoming a primary source for international courts or human rights tribunals to hold specific actors accountable for their actions,
 - iii. establish to fellow pupils and international entities that the funds and resources remain used for the humanitarian purpose it was intended for;
2. Proposes that all parties ensure unhindered and safe humanitarian access through all feasible routes, ergo:
 - a. prioritizing cross-line delivery as the primary method of assistance to strengthen national administrative unity,
 - b. authorizing the temporary use of specific cross-border points only when:
 - i. cross-line routes are rendered physically impassable by active hostilities,
 - ii. a shared technical committee confirms that the local civilian population faces an immediate threat of starvation or medical collapse,
 - c. requiring that all entities controlling border crossings allow the passage of neutral humanitarian observers to ensure no military hardware is transported under the pretext of receiving aid;
3. Seeks that every country hardens the selection criteria for the troops who might be deployed to manage civil unrests to protect the overall physical and psychological well being of citizens, by:

- a. requiring documented evidence of respectful behaviour towards human-rights norms, low incidence of prior misconduct, and psychological resilience to high-stress crowd control scenarios that may occur,
- b. subjecting personnel to periodic psychological tests, where:
 - i. accredited psychologists will administer the tests, have the results logged in a secure, auditable system, and then invite an international body, voted by member states of the resolution, to conduct periodic reviews and issue verification statements,
 - ii. they will be required to answer procedural questions and individually propose a plan of approach to a random crisis scenario,
- c. ensuring that repeated violators are automatically removed from future protest-response rosters, by connecting deployment eligibility to a clear record-keeping system that tracks any abuse of force incident;

4. Calls upon all Member States to establish clear legal frameworks and protocols and guarantee the safety and independence of journalists and civil society reporters present at civil protests, by:

- a. prohibiting the targeting and harassment of individuals clearly identified as media personnel,
- b. ensuring that the possession of professional equipment, such as cameras or microphones, is not used as a pretext for criminal investigation or arrest,
- c. Mandating specialized de-escalation training for security forces regarding the international legal rights of the press in high-tension environments,
- d. establishing a neutral monitoring body comprised of a media representative from every Member Country, to document and report violations of press freedom during active crises,
- e. warranting that in case of any violation of the principles entailed in this specific framework, the individuals, either police chiefs, government ministers, or local governors, who ordered the detention of journalists face:
 - i. asset freezes, any property or bank account held in one of the Member States being blocked,
 - ii. visa bans,
 - iii. business prohibitions with any companies and citizens from the prosecutor state;

5. Calls upon all Member States to accomplish, with transparency and much-needed devotion, an eminently strict procedure and careful selection of reliable and even-handed special authorities, which:

- a. has to include some unequivocal rules and protocols that will be implemented with the help of the state's government, such as:
 - i. the presence of even-handed people who are in charge of naming authorities and reviewing candidates correctly and objectively,

- ii. background checks of the candidates that will be made by the police department conducted according to the domestic procedure that should respect the parameters of every Member State's policy and be applied equally to all states, preventing forms of unilateral approaches that would create discrepancies,
- iii. a through verification of the candidate's beliefs and mental health,
- iv. equal chances of being a candidate for all people;
- b. will strongly assure that positive aspects will arise, such as the following matters:
 - i. excessive force is not used,
 - ii. the consistency of law enforcement,
 - iii. strengthening systemic integrity and power control,
 - iv. all human rights are respected;

6. Calls for determining protected protest zones in vulnerable areas, under the supervision of impartial observers selected through internationally recognised bodies, which are guaranteed legal protection, immunity from arrest or intimidation while executing their duties, by:

- a. requiring that authorities operating within these areas strictly follow the procedures, prohibiting the use of lethal force except in cases of life-threatening situations,
- b. requiring that local authorities efficiently communicate to the public the limits and duration of these zones through official channels, ensuring that all citizens are aware of their rights,
- c. establishing clear corridors and routes to these protest zones to enable the safe evacuation of injured protesters, and delivery of medical assistance,
- d. ensuring, in case of any violation, that faulty authorities receive the proper sanctions, such as:
 - i. salary reduction by 5-20% on a period of 1-3 months, depending on the severity of the act,
 - ii. creating a file to closer track any future violations,
 - iii. dismissal from the police executive forces;

7. Recommends the establishment of an early warning mechanism to identify the risks of violent crackdowns, and be able to respond rapidly, by:

- a. monitoring rising tensions through cooperation with society organisations, local authorities, and observers,
- b. making risk assessment reports periodically and sharing them with UN bodies,
- c. deploying mediation teams to help dialogue between the government and protest groups before escalation happens;

8. Advocates for the expansion of “Early Recovery” and resilience projects to restore basic civilian services, in a way that:

- a. focuses investment on the repair and maintenance of critical infrastructure, specifically:
 - i. Electrical grids supplying hospitals and water pumping stations,

ii. Primary and secondary educational facilities,
iii. Irrigation systems essential for national food security as outlined in Resolution 2417;

- b. Conditions this funding on the nation's commitment to providing non-discriminatory access to these services for all civilians, regardless of their political status or previous participation in protest;

9. Suggests the establishment of a Humanitarian Association to oversee the equitable distribution of aid throughout the territory, which will further:

- a. be composed of representatives from the government, the UN office for the Coordination of major international donors,
- b. implement a dual-verification digital register to:
 - i. tracking the movement of goods from point of entry to final destination to prevent diversion,
 - ii. ensure aid is distributed based on a transport based on a transport, needs-based assessments verified by local and international experts,
- c. require that the government provides security guarantees for aid convoys while allowing UN personnel to perform unannounced inspections of storage facilities;

10. Encourages Member States to establish dedicated cooperation units within law enforcement authorities responsible for maintaining constant communication with protest organizers pre-, inter-, and post-demonstrations, with the objective of:

- a. Identifying potential risks and points of tension in advance, to ensure public safety,
- b. Agreeing on protest routes, safety measures, and de-escalation strategies,
- c. Building trust through transparency and constant dialogue;

11. Calls for the establishment of a Biennial Progress Review Mechanism (BPRM), which will:

- a. be in charge of evaluating the effectiveness of the humanitarian and training measures outlined in this resolution, requiring a formal report to be submitted to the UN Security Council every 24 months, to detail:
 - i. the impact of the "Humanitarian Impact Database",
 - ii. the status of police training initiatives;

- b. encourage Member States to provide voluntary technical expertise and "Peer-Review" assessments to countries implementing new crowd-management protocols to ensure they meet international legal standards,
- c. recommend that any unallocated funds from the $200 Million initial investment be redirected toward long-term judicial capacity-building programs to strengthen the local rule of law,
- d. affirm that the ultimate goal of these measures is to foster a safe environment where the right to peaceful assembly is respected without compromising public order or the safety of the state while taking into account:
 - i. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights,
 - ii. The National Policy concerning the aforementioned matter,
 - iii. The National Constitution,
 - iv. A/HRC/55/60;

12. Calls for Member States to integrate mental health response teams into emergency services employed during large-scale protests, with the objective of:

- a. providing immediate psychological first aid to affected civilians in order to:
 - i. Prevent the aggravation of the affected civilians state,
 - ii. Support individuals experiencing trauma or distress,
 - iii. Not leave unattended affected civilians through the injurious experience,
- b. coordinating follow-up care with local health systems to ensure:
 - i. Continuity with the medical diagnosis,
 - ii. Affected civilians have the best medical treatment through the whole recovery process;

13. Further invites Member States to implement a monitoring program, in collaboration with the national police of each state and the International Police Organization, with the purpose of:

- a. ensuring the general safety of the population when releasing offenders, taking into consideration:
 - i. the gravity of the crime committed,
 - ii. the behaviour shown during imprisonment,

b. the results of the psychological evaluations conducted by the International Association for Correctional and Forensic Psychology, based on:

- iv. signs of mental disorders,
- v. behavioural patterns,
- vi. prediction of risk of future reoffending,
- vii. violent tendencies,

c. overseeing the rehabilitation of felons post-release, by INTERPOL, providing a system of probation and monitorization of high-level criminals who do not pose a threat to society after a psychiatric evaluation, taking into account:

- i. each state's criteria for the gravity of a crime,
- ii. each state's laws and policies regarding probation,

d. providing a system in which the social services and different Non-Governmental Organizations will monitor the rate of inclusion of the ex-convicts;

14. Calls for the strict protection of medical neutrality, most importantly during protests and crises, whilst fully respecting national sovereignty, security considerations and urging member states to:

- a. ensure the fact that the medical team can operate their system without any type of intimidation or interference from foreign factors, while still maintaining public order and security;
- b. warrant the right of injured individuals to receive timely medical treatment without the risk of unpredictable confinement;
- c. conduct research and advocacy to raise awareness about the importance of medical neutrality and to support those affected by its violations;
- d. engage with communities and armed forces to foster trust and cooperation, ensuring that healthcare services are not targeted in any sort of way;
- e. provide training, as well as education opportunities to healthcare professionals regarding the importance of medical neutrality and the legal protections they are entitled to;
- f. do all that is possible to prevent the misuse of medical facilities and personnel for any purposes that pose a risk to national security or public safety;

15. Recommends the implementation of a supplement to the Model Protocol for Law Enforcement Officials to Promote and Protect Human Rights in the Context of Peaceful Protests, by:

- a. providing non-binding guidelines on the adequate use of technologies such as:
 - i. facial recognition,
 - ii. social media monitoring,
 - iii. crowd-control equipment,
 - iv. monitoring systems,
- b. encouraging the organization and accessibility of existing and future reports within relevant databases,
- c. ensuring that the previously stated technologies are used proportionally, only for legally justified actions, such as, but not limited to, public security and humanitarian purposes, while taking into account:
 - i. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights,
 - ii. The National Policy concerning the afore-mentioned matter,
 - iii. The National Constitution,
 - iv. A/HRC/55/60,
- d. respecting the principles of national sovereignty, domestic legislation, and public order engagements;

16. Suggests all member States to implement their own public-security surveillance system, in accordance with each State's Constitution and legislation, in order to ensure the safety and security of all citizens and the safety and peacefulness of the protests, by:

- a. monitoring large public assemblies in order to easily identify potential threats to any civilians, such as: violent radical infiltrators and disruptors, any form of vandalism within the crowd, dangerous weapons capable of undermining the internal stability of the State, or organized radicalized criminal groups that pose a threat to each country's constitutional order,
- b. enabling rapid deployment of emergency medical teams and firefighters in areas where injuries occur,
- c. better identifying dangerous individuals or extremist groups engaging in destruction of public infrastructure and acts of violence,
- d. ensuring that protests do not escalate beyond the control of local authorities by providing early-warning alerts and coordination tools for the competent institutions, as well as protecting schools, hospitals, and public institutions from any sort of violence that is caused by non-peaceful protestors;

17. Calls for the establishment of a new commission under the United Nations General Assembly, named The Commission for International Counterterrorism Support (hereinafter CICS), under the surveillance of the UNCTC and UNDISSEC committees, which shall:

- a. be composed of both contributing and supported states, established by a clear criteria to ensure collaboration, namely:
 - i. contributing states, which will be the countries with advanced military and counter-terrorism capabilities,
 - ii. supported states, which are the countries in need of help facing significant internal terrorism threats, high levels of organized terrorist activity, and struggling to combat the risks due to a lack of resources,
- b. divide the states by other criterias, each country receiving a score in each of the following ones from 1 to 10, those being:
 - i. severity of terrorism threat,
 - ii. economic capability,
 - iii. security infrastructure,
 - iv. regional stability,
- c. make the contributing states acknowledge the need of direct military and intelligence support towards the supported states, providing specialized units to assist in combating terrorist groups, including joint military operations in high-risk zones and sharing intelligence networks and data to track terrorist movements across the borders,
- d. ensure collaboration between all countries;

18. Seeks to properly define the difference between peaceful protestors, fully exercising their legal rights in accordance with national legislation, and violent actors engaging in: damaging key infrastructure, such as, but not limited to:

- a. hospitals,
- b. Schools,
- c. communication systems,
- d. essential public utilities,
- e. transport networks,
- f. vandalism, arson, physical violence or other acts that endanger civilians, law-enforcement personnel, medical workers, journalists, or humanitarian actors,

- g. the participation of foreign-backed destabilisation efforts, logistical support for external dangerous actors and coordination of such groups,
- h. using peaceful protests as a cover for organized criminal activity, extremist violence, or the deliberate spreading of misinformation intended to incite panic or unrest, suggesting:
 - i. emergency medical response,
 - ii. Deescalation measures,
 - iii. protection of civilians and essential infrastructure,
 - iv. clear communication between national authorities and emergency services, while respecting domestic legislation and national sovereignty;

19. Further encourages Member States to establish a nationally coordinated Rapid Humanitarian Response Mechanism, with the purpose of improving communication, coordination, and delivery of urgent humanitarian assistance during crises, by:

- a. forming a national emergency coordination framework among competent government authorities, civil protection bodies, emergency medical services, hospitals, local administrative authorities and recognised humanitarian partners to:
 - i. receive and assess urgent requests for information about civilians injured, displaced and/or suffering destruction of basic infrastructure, denial of medical care or other urgent humanitarian needs;
 - ii. determine when to activate or provide support to established mobile humanitarian task forces, medical services, shelters or relief agencies;
 - iii. ensure that there is no duplication with respect to public security, surveillance, anti-terrorism, legal review or law enforcement mechanisms described elsewhere in this resolution; and
 - iv. ensure that all assistance provided to affected civilians is performed impartially without differentiation based on political beliefs, nationality, ethnic origin, religion, sex, social standing, or participation in peaceful assembly,
- b. Establishing secure channels for early warning and communication through which local government authorities, hospitals, humanitarian organisations, journalists, representatives of civil society, and community leaders can report urgent protection issues, while making certain that:
 - i. all information received is vetted and verified by qualified national entities before any operational activity is undertaken,
 - ii. any collected data will only be utilised for humanitarian coordination, emergency response and civilian protection,
 - iii. there will be no use of or misappropriation of personal information of protesters, victims, witnesses, journalists, medical personnel, or humanitarian representatives for any unlawful or political profiling or monitoring purposes,
 - iv. the mechanism does not interfere with lawful peaceful protests or with the domestic legal responsibilities of Member States,

- c. Coordinating emergency assistance delivery to civilians affected by, as necessary, due to the prevailing humanitarian need. This includes but is not limited to:
 - i. arranging for the transport of individuals who have sustained injuries to hospitals or clinics/treatment facilities;
 - ii. assisting people at immediate risk of harm (i.e., through locating shelter, safe space(s), and/or relief organizations);
 - iii. distributing food; clean water; hygiene items; blankets; first aid items; and communication devices, etc., to civilians in need; and
 - iv. providing referrals to vulnerable populations (including children, the elderly, persons with disabilities, journalists, health care workers, and displaced persons) for proper legal protection and medical, social, or psychological assistance, etc.
- d. Collaborating with Appropriate Humanitarian Links or Agencies, such as Approved Non-Governmental Organizations and Governments and/or Agencies from Other Countries in an effort to:
 - i. help ensure national capacity for emergency humanitarian coordination is adequate,
 - ii. provide technical assistance related to issues such as crisis mapping, shelter, medical triage, civilian protection,
 - iii. provide assistance that is, and promotes the principle of, international assistance,
- e. Requesting periodic national reviews regarding the effectiveness of coordination, including:
 - i. timeframes for the response,
 - ii. quality of coordination,
 - iii. number of civilian living persons who were assisted,
 - iv. compliance with personal data protection,
 - v. respect for humanitarian principles;

20. Encourages and insists upon inclusive national dialogue sessions, by:

- a. engaging youth, civil population, as well as community leaders,
- b. initiating participation through nationally approved social media platforms,
- c. assuring representation from as many diverse regional, social, cultural and economical groups as possible, stimulating the peaceful stating of grievances through:
 - i. the encouragement of dialogue-based platforms which will provide direct communication from citizens to the government,
 - ii. the stimulation of lawful, unbiased and nonviolent channels meant for public expression,
- d. facilitating the general use of impartial mediators as to strengthen communication:

- i. encouraging, where permitted by the state and appropriate, involvements from professionally trained mediators, in order to play the role of intermediaries,
- ii. advocating for well-structured and organised channels to prevent any possible misunderstandings and escalations;

21. Further encourages Member States to establish, fund, and support mobile humanitarian task forces under the guidance of relevant national authorities, in coordination with the United Nations, regional organizations, by:

- a. a sustainable and transparent funding allocation to create, train, deploy, and maintain mobile humanitarian task forces, through:
 - i. Utilising already allocated funds to Member States to fund the purpose of the task force under the allotted budget categories, e.g. emergency response, civil protection, public safety, human rights monitoring, or humanitarian assistance;
 - ii. Encouraging Member States (where financially possible) to provide an additional voluntary contribution equal to 0.00003% of their National GDP to fund the operation of these task forces;
 - iii. To ensure all funding solely supports the humanitarian, protective, medical, logistical, investigative, and victim support-related tasks of the Task Forces;
 - iv. Establish that all task force-related budgets are subject to public reporting, parliamentary scrutiny, or other national-level oversight mechanisms (to prevent misuse of funds or politically-driven deployments):
- b. establishing rapid response mobile task forces made up of professionals trained to handle situations where civil protests are met excessively with unlawful or violent means, such as:
 - i. Medical personnel trained in rapid trauma care, first aid, treatment of injuries related to crowds, and developing a plan for evacuation,
 - ii. Legal aid workers who will inform individuals who have been arrested, injured, or displaced due to a protest of their basic rights and connect them with appropriate legal assistance,
 - iii. Humanitarian logistics personnel who will provide water, food, blankets, hygiene products, communication devices, and other essential items to assist those in need,
 - iv. Protection Officers who will identify vulnerable populations (e.g., children, elderly people, people with disabilities, journalists, healthcare workers, and peaceful protesters) that might have been exposed to heightened risk,
 - v. Specialists in Conflict De-Escalation Trained in assisting local authorities, the organizers of protests, and community leaders through mediation, negotiation, and non-violent forms of communication to maintain peace within their communities,

- c. before they can be sent into the field, all task force members will receive compulsory training courses on the following topics:
 - i. International Human Rights Law – freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, association, due process, and protection against arbitrary detention,
 - ii. International Humanitarian Principles – humanity, neutrality, impartiality, independence, proportionality, and the need to protect civilians,
 - iii. Safe ways to help civilians during protests for emergency situations without increasing tension, disrupting lawful peaceful assemblies,
 - iv. Identifying and responding to instances of excessive use of force, including unlawful detention, enforced disappearances, torture, intimidation, censorship, and collective punishment,
 - v. Protecting victims and witnesses with regard to maintaining confidentiality, dignity, informed consent, and safety,
 - vi. Digital security; collecting evidence securely; protecting data; and protecting against abuses by government agencies surveilling individuals taking part in protests, journalists, human rights defenders, or humanitarian workers,
 - vii. Gender-responsive approaches and child-responsive approaches, especially in relation to those involved with sexual violence, separation from their families, exploitation, or threatened with harm;
- d. Deployments of task forces must only be done when there is an established humanitarian mandate that clearly delineates the tasks that will be performed by the task force and that:
 - i. The task force will not be used as a military or political enforcement unit to suppress peaceful protests, monitor citizens for their political beliefs, or assist in the punishment of someone for peacefully dissenting,
 - ii. The sole purpose of the task force is to protect civilians, minimize harm, provide emergency assistance, document any abuses that are occurring, and support the safe and orderly evacuation of people from the area,
 - iii. The task force will only enter a high-risk area if the lawful entry is consistent with national law and international norms on human rights, and does not present dangers to either civilians or task force personnel,
 - iv. To the maximum extent feasible, the task force will coordinate its activities with local emergency services, hospitals, humanitarian organizations, and community leaders in the area where the task force is deployed,
 - v. The task force will withdraw from an area if its continued presence will result in the escalation of violence, present a danger to civilians, or be used by any party to perform propaganda, intimidate, or repress;

22. Suggest the issue of a formal "Human Rights Based Engagement Letter" that will list three concrete benchmarks the target government of an affected country must meet within 90 days, such as:

- a. adopting a written Rules of Engagement (ROE) that align with the UN Basic Principles on the Use of Force,
- b. release all peaceful demonstrators detained solely for exercising free expression, in order to:
 - i. align with the principles of liberty,
 - ii. have a higher chance at mediating the tension between civilians and government parties, by ensuring basic right of freedom of speech,
- c. launch an independent, internationally monitored investigation of protest related killings, sustained by professionals;

23. Proposes mandatory training classes for law enforcement agencies and armed forces, implemented in order to:

- a. ensure the troops use their power for the greater good and in proportion with the level of threat they are facing,
- b. promote de-escalation Techniques, which will:
 - i. minimize injuries and fatalities by fostering skills in communication, situational awareness and negotiation to resolve conflicts without physical force,
 - ii. test their tactical patience and emotional regulation, therefore demonstrating whether or not they have parts of the necessary skills to hold such power,
 - iii. enhance not only legitimacy, but also public trust by making sure that every interaction will follow a clear ethical framework that emphasizes its value for human life and highlights procedural justice over sheer dominance,
- c. allow and help personnel to distinguish between criminal intent and behavioral health crises, such as mental illness or, in some cases, neurodiversity, and adapt their response based on this, while provided with the standardized tools to do so. The compulsory aid consists of:
 - i. InterRAI Brief Mental Health Screener (BMHS): this is an evidence-based form created specifically for police officers to recognize indicators of serious mental disorders during encounters, civil or not,
 - ii. triage Assessment System (TAS): the set-up evaluates crisis reactions across three big and frequent domains: Affective (emotions like anger vs. fear), Cognitive (the person's perception of the threat), and Behavioral (actions like approach or avoidance);
 - iii. Adult Crisis Assessment Tool (A-CAT): represents a lifespan assessment tool (developed by the Praed Foundation), generally used to evaluate psychiatric severity and service needs during a crisis;
 - iv. spread awareness regarding the established Alternatives to Lethal Force, which requires higher-ups to train personnel to use tactics involving time, distance, and shielding as to manage threats efficiently, ensuring that force is only used as a last resort;
 - v. guarantee only the most competent candidates can join law enforcement agencies and armed forces by following-up the required training with a diploma and one year probation as to review the persons' abilities, without which becoming a sworn officer will not be possible;

24. Proposes the establishment within the national institutions of each Member State of an internal review commission known as the National Review System for Public Order and Social Security (NRSPOSS) that should address causes related to civilian unrest and humanitarian impacts, analysing the constitutional actions undertaken by:

- a. having the authority to assemble a multidisciplinary team with expertise in intelligence analysis, law enforcement, and counter-terrorist intelligence that will have to be approved by the competent sovereign institutions,
- b. the commission will draft the assessment based on the following criteria:
 - i. Each measure shall be graded on a scale of 1–100, and based on the score, to further encourage the following administrative decisions,
 - ii. If the score is between 90 and 100 for the respective regions, stabilization measures are in order, with the possibility of emergency funding a sum of a minimum of 20.000.000 and a maximum of 50.000.000,
 - iii. If the score is between 89 and 50, stabilization actions are in order, as well as reinforcing the solutions through a sum of a minimum of 50.000.000 and a maximum of 1.000.000.000,
 - iv. In the scenario where the score is below 50, the commission will assess if serious constitutional measures shall be temporarily applied to further protect civilians, alongside national security,
- c. the multidisciplinary team will also draft a recommendation regarding which of the aforementioned set of stabilization measures should be implemented and enforced, following the grading process of the country,
- d. the assessments will have to be first checked by the competent authorities before any actions are taken, to ensure peaceful stabilization alongside state protection;

25. Expresses its hope to remain actively seized on the matter.
